

Huawhenua

Vegetables – Bingo

Teacher
notes

Vegetable bingo using te reo Māori is a fun way to teach Māori language and introduce students to different types of vegetables.

There is a set of 12 bingo cards. Each bingo card has nine vegetables with their Māori and English name. Each card is different so that there can only be one winning card.

Instructions

Preparation:

1. Print the bingo call sheet for yourself, then cut each square out and place them in a container.
2. Print bingo cards. Laminate these for future use.
3. Use markers for students to cross off each vegetable on the card.
4. Read how the game works.

How the game works:

1. Draw a vegetable name from the container.
2. Call out the vegetable (try using the Māori name).
3. Students then cross off the vegetable on their card.
4. When a student has all the squares crossed off on their card, they call BINGO! They are the winner.

Note: if you have more than one copy of the bingo cards to cater for a class of more than 12 students, then there may be two winners.

5. Hand out a laminated card to each student.
6. Explain to your students how the game works.

Students will learn:

- The names of different types of vegetables in te reo Māori
- Listening skills
